sale of a Wealthy Parsienne's Wardrobe Excites Comment-The Cycling Fad at Newport.

A young girl who is devoted to riding a bicycle found that her sallor hat did not protect her head sufficiently from the sun. and one day the idea came to her to widen of the hat, if possible. Every one knows how difficult it is to ride against the breeze with a wide brim hat. She took some crepe tissue paper of a soft green shade and tied it around the brim of her sailor. It fluttered in the breeze, but its lightness offered no resistance. It shaded her eyes from the glare and kept the hot sun from her neck and the sides of her head as well as her face. The paper will stand quite a considerable rough use, as it is tough, and it is not expensive compared to the comfort it gives.

The following is part of a London letter from Miss Anna Farquhar, of this city, to

"In one particular London is especially restful to an American—in its freedom from an excess of wheelmen. The American at home begins to take on the look of a haunted man, always looking behind him for some dread object en promenade. In London, if the craze is still on, it is nfined to the rural districts, for in a day's peregrinations one is apt to meet no nore than a half a dozen cyclists, and requently none at all. However, I did see one in an unexpected place. Strolling along through the cloisters of Westminster Abbey, in a mood especially sympathetic with the past, seeing an open grating and looking in for silence and a monkish at-mosphere, what should I see instead but an apartment done up with modern drapes and cushions? What shocked my sensibilties the most was a bicycle leaning against a table boldly, and not in the least apologetically. To be sure, we were contemporaries, and it had more rights in that especial cell than had I, but my inrusion was unwitting, and it had an air of belonging there, along with some other When I arrived at the meaning of this situation by way of a postman delivering letters to the cell, I discovered t to be the residence of one of the canons the abbey; moreover, that these quarters just off the cloister green are occupied domestically by the canons of the church. They rarely see a ray of light, but the place is absolutely dry."

inute on the wrong side; cooking at seaside hotels; when the heart has grown heavy from looking at yachts that you don't own; when the contemplation of the moon interferes with that early to bed which is rendered necessary by early rising, then it is that one realizes that home is an ideal summer resort, even to the Newport's fair society cyclists have introduced two new features of wheeling life on Bellevue avanue. The footmen who erstwhile sat so stiffly on their perches in front the turnouts of the "four hundred" have been trained to follow their fair to sit up very straight, and the cycling proing them how to do it. Miss McAllister set the fashion. The other fad is impromptu rates on the neighboring roadways between fair scorchers on their "bikes" and an equal number of their social sisters mounted on thoroughbred horses that are so much neglected for the time being.

The wardrobe of a wealthy Parisienne was sold at auction. A press comment was angry when his costly costumes were sold for a song. He considered that the treasthe folly of a selfish leader of fashion, who had become a helpless invalid, yet would not acknowledge that her day was over. 'No woman with good sense,' he would say, 'is justified in having more gowns than she expects to wear. A few becoming costumes ought to satisfy the richest and most ambitious women."

The American Boy.

Washington Post. It was on the little lawn of a handsome nouse on New Hampshire avenue the other day-one of those hermetically-sealed, deserted-looking mansions the fashionable quarter is crowded with. Right in the midst of a velvety bit of turf there were four sticks stuck, and on their tops a couple of feet from the ground, a newspaper was spread. And under the shade this formed a district messenger boy, in uniform, was lying fast asleep. It wasn't his yard, it wasn't his turf, it wasn't even his time, but ne was an American, and he knew a good thing when he saw it. It made me remem ber another bit of American small boyishness I saw one day last week. It was in a side street on Capitol Hill and there was a fresh breeze blowing. A boy on a bicycle came sailing down the street. I say sailing literally, for fastened to the hand'ebar of his machine was a real sail, and by a series of tacks that, would have done credit to any skipper afloat, he managed o skim about wherever he pleased. He had brains, that boy, and he wasn't going to et his legs do anything that his head could

WORD FOR GENIUS

New York Critics Calling Attention to the Shakspearean Impersonator-Local Bills.

The New York World prints the following complimentary notice at the head of its dramatic column:

There is soon to appear before a New York audience a young actor in whose future there is probably merged the future of Shakespearian acting in America. He comes from the West, a grievous fault in demn. It is difficult to convince Gotham-Miss Nellie Camblin and Miss Mattle Tuttle, of Peorla, came Thursday to visit Mrs.
R. H. Lowe at No. 276 North Alabama
The actor, the painter or the musician who The actor, the painter or the musician who has succeeded under the less favorable conditions existing in the smaller communities of this land in making his way to a certain point deserves more credit than his counterpart in the metropolis, and yet when he comes seeking to have his efforts approved and the favorable decision of less influential spheres confirmed ae finds indifference and unwillingness.

> The young actor in question is one Walker Whiteside. Two years and a half ago he came to New York with all the eagerness of youth, its enthusiasm and its optimism. He appeared at the Union-square Theater in a round of his favorite characters-the men of Shakespeare-for it is to the illustration of the bard's works that he has devoted his life. A few critics did him the justice to attend. Their verdict was unanimous. They discerned in the adolescent, for he was but little more, a being in whom the sacred fire was burning, a ual, original and endowed with the advantages of temperamental force. He was crude—a rough diamond, in a way—and yet in spite of the lack of polish his talents were bright and shining, and there lurked in him the parts of a great artist. By the great majority of the journals, though, he was ignored; a few even sought to exercise their wit and to be amusing where they

The experience was a bitter one. Walker Whiteside left and returned to those who recognized his worth. Strengthened by he will make in a few weeks the second assault upon the citadel of metropolitan ap-Remember the name: Walker

Week of "Finnegan's Ball."

Murray & Mack, the Irish team, supported by a good company, come to the Park Theater this week, opening to-morrow afternoon, for their annual engagement, in that successful comedy, "Finnegan's Ball." This play, on its first presentation, jumped at once into popular favor, and has done an enormous business for the past two son they have introduced a burlesque bicomes in for her share of attention. The supporting company includes the Loring Sisters, in their "mirror" dance; Gracie Cummings, Edith Newton, Winifred Stuart, Rita Dixon, Lonnie Dean, George H. Emerick, author of the play; Clayton E. White, Bert Leslie, Charles Lamb and Vincent Minella. The company remains all mockets. An enjoyable lawn party was that of Miss Nellie Michelson, given at her home Minella. The company remains all week at Georgia Minstrels at English's. A revival of old-time minstrelsy will take place at English's Opera House Friday evening next, when Richards & Pringle's Georgia Minstrels will appear. The company is composed entirely of colored performers, and includes Billy Kersands, Jalvan. Craig. Hillman and Vernon, James White. James Moore, W. O. Terry, C. F. Alexander. Neil Moore and the famous Crescent City Quartet.

Notes of the Stage. "The Fatal Card" is among the early bookings at the Grand. Next week Al G. Field's big minstrel com-pany is coming to the Grand Opera House.

"Plays and Players." a new musical com-edy in three acts, will be seen at the Park Theater all next week, George Henschel has arranged to start for the United States at the end of March in order to give a series or recitals in April and May. Ada Rehan is spending a holiday in Cumperland and will remain there until the middle of September, when she returns to America, spending a week in Paris on her Helene Mora comes to the Grand this fall in her new piece, "A Modern Mephisto." Indianapolis will then have an opportunity to hear this wonderful vocalist to the best "Delmonico's at Six," "The Prodigal Fa-ther," "The Cotton King," Hopkins's Transmany other high-class attractions will be seen at the Park Theater this season.

Olga Nethersole has appeared during the past week at the Grand Theater, London, in the ever popular "Camille." During her long tour of the provinces which will follow, she will play in a dramatic version of "Carmen," and an adaptation of Dumas'

Lydia Lebruin, an American soprano, has been engaged for the St. James Hall ballad concerts and smoking promenade concerts. She opened at the Queen's Hall last week with success and with a capital orchestra and high class music.

The gorgeous American Travesty Company, with Eddie Foy at its head, opens the regular season at English's Opera House Monday evening, Sept. 2, in "Little Robinson Crusoe." "Little Robinson Crusoe" has been running all summer at the Schiller Theater, Chicago, and comes direct here from that city. The only novelty of the past ten days in London has been the production of the musical farce "All Aboard" at the Criterion, which, during Mr. Wyndham's absence, has passed into the hands of Miss Clasy Graham. This piece is by the authors of "The Galety Girl," Owen Hall and J. T. Tanner. The cast includes Kate Cutler, H. Delange, Horace Mills, C. P. Little and Ada Reeve. The Empire Theater is being overhauled preparatory to opening on Labor day (Sept. 2). It will present a very bright appearance, as it has been newly carpeted and decorated throughout. The initial attrac-tion will be Kalbfield's Orpheum Stars, from the Orpheum Theater, San Francisco, Judging from the list of artists, which includes the celebrated singer. Mlle: Troja, the entertalnment will be above the average. Manager Fennessey has a strong booking for the coming season, including all the old-time favorites, such as Weber & Fields' three companies, Rice & Barton's shows, Gus Hill's attractions, Hyde's Comedians

GUNBOATS INSTEAD OF DUCKS. A Different Feature in Aquatics at

"A Night in Peking" covers ten thousand yards of canvas in its scenic appliances. "Last Days of Pompeii" covered one thousand yards last year. The other appointments of the two spectacles show about the same contrast. James Pain & Sons are preparing a new picture for the Indianapolis engagement. It will include all of the good points of the old scenery and a number of new ones. The costumes will be new. The ballet in this year's production will be stronger in number and training than the one seen at Lincoln Park last September. The production of "A Night in Peking" calls for some especial pieces in fireworks that are not given in any other of the Pain spectacles. The newest designs in pyrotechnics which this firm has perfected this year will, in some instances, be shown for the first time in public. The spectace has music which was arranged for it by P. S. Gilmore, the bandmaster. The number of dancing girls during the coming engagement will be three t mes that of "Last Days of Pompeii." Water is now being pumped into the lake at Lincoln Park and several changes are under way. The band stand will not be ver the lake to obstruct the view of he audience as it was last fall. The lake will be of more importance in "A Night in Peking." Instead of gondolas and ducks floating about on the surface of the water it will be occupied by gunboats and Chinese junks. The gunboats will storm the city of Peking with balls of fire and aid the soldiers in their work of destruction. There will be a liberal number of French, English and Chinese soldiers, who will wear the uniforms and carry arms peculiar o each of the countries. The citizens' carnial commettee is endeavoring to make he night of Sept. 5, when the railroads will give a rate of 1 cent a mile to the
